

ABOUT US

Read Write Now is a community-based volunteer organisation that has been operating in Western Australia since 1977.

Approximately 650 students work with 500 trained volunteer tutors annually to achieve their personal and professional goals.

Literacy is a life skill that some adults in our community have missed out on due to interrupted schooling, sickness, leaving the education system at a young age or due to having a learning disability.

It is never too late to learn and help is available to improve reading, writing, maths, study or basic computer skills.

It's good and it works. I've gone from not being able to read anything to reading newsletters and things at work. I can read books to my daughter.

Writing out invoices and timesheets I would only use words I knew I could spell, it was pretty dismal. Working with my Read Write Now tutor changed all of that.

OUR STUDENTS

The Read Write Now program is for adults aged 18 years and over. Adults from overseas need to be permanent residents with reasonable spoken English.

Adult learners may need help to:

- read a newspaper or fill in forms
- keep up with studies and coursework
- get or keep a job
- use a computer and email
- read to a child and support them at school

Adult learners meet their tutor:

- one-on-one
- in a public venue or online
- for about an hour and a half per week

VOLUNTEER TUTORS

Are you interested in sharing your love of reading and writing?

Do you have good English literacy, numeracy and computer skills?

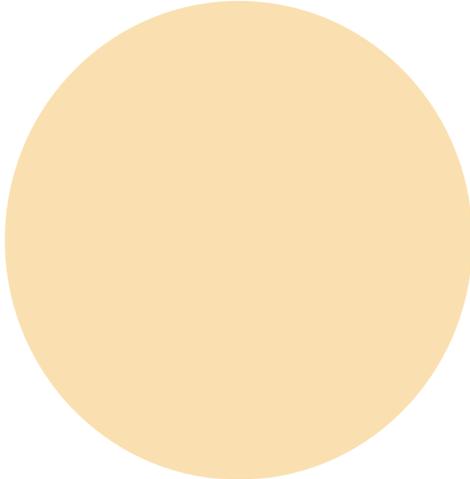

If you are interested in helping others and being prepared to spend two to three hours a week in tutoring and lesson preparation, become a volunteer and make a difference.

Call or visit our website to apply.
